L.A COUCH FIRST NATIONS AROMATHERAPY

'Wadhi' Bush First Nations Aromatherapy

The word "wadhi" translates to "bush" in the Gamilaraay/Yuwaalaraay language and embodies the spirit of the land, connecting you to the ancient scent of the bush.

Our ancestors used natural remedies to achieve profound physical and spiritual healing, enhancing spiritual awareness and connection to self and country. The scent of the bush has a positive effect on our emotional body, assisting us when we are feeling down or stuck.

A Breath of Fresh Air

Premium eco-friendly travel towel featuring authentic Indigenous artwork by Erika Fernandez. Quick-dry microfibre technology meets cultural heritage for your nature adventures.

This travel towel design represents the healing that you feel from being in nature. Whether it's going for a walk, to the beach/river, camping or out bush. Breathing in the fresh air, feeling the sun on your skin, and the land beneath your feet are all ways of healing mentally, physically and emotionally. The large circle represents Mother Nature and the patterns and symbols around reveals everything in the land working together in harmony to help grow one another - bringing nature's healing power to every journey.

Dreamtime Connection | Aboriginal Matching Game

Give children a gift that's both fun and full of meaning with this beautifully crafted memory matching set. Thoughtfully designed for curious little minds, these FSC wooden rounds help children develop focus, memory skills, and problem-solving, all while gently introducing them to Aboriginal culture in an age-appropriate, respectful way.

Perfect for playtime at home, the set can be used far beyond the classic memory game. Children can explore storytelling, sort and classify the rounds, create artwork, or use them in imaginative play and small world setups. Each piece encourages creativity, connection, and learning through hands-on play.

Made from sustainably sourced FSC-certified wood, the rounds are durable, eco-friendly, and safe for little hands. This set makes a meaningful, educational gift that supports children in learning about culture, Country, and community in a playful, engaging way something they'll treasure long after the game ends.
